1.		Interpret the following situation to emphasize the importance of cross-cultural communication. Sissy is 4 years of age and has recently moved from Singapore to live in Australia. She has been at the service for a month now. Her first language is Malay, in which she uses to respond to all educators and children. She is beginning to pick up a few words of English but continues to communicate in her home language. Many educators respond to sissy by saying 'I don't understand, and trying to get her to use English instead'. Giving Sissy directions or routines to follow is quite a challenge as she doesn't respond when being spoken to, instead turning away and putting her head down, sheltering her body away. During meal and snack times, even when encouraged with hand gestures, Sissy refuses to join the group and sit with the other children at the table. Sissy has made no friends and doesn't respond to any of the educators either. Sissy sits on her own or plays independently with the same dolls and puzzle each time she attends.	15
